ROASTED TO DEATH

Six Year Old Tot Loses Life in Terrible Manner at Humble Home

Edith Dodaon, aged 6 years, was so badly burned yesterday morning at her hovel home in Thompson's alley, First Ward, that she died a few hours after receiving the injury.

The family consists of five. The father works in the Cotton Mill, and the mother at the time was visiting at a neighbor's house, leaving the girl and a nine-year-old son in charge of the house.

According to the boy's story, the child was in the act of replenishing the stove with wood, and her light garment caught fire and enveloped her in a flame that almost burned her frail body to a crisp before those who heard her outcry could reach the house.

Here is a case that appeals to the Christian people. A little aid extended will be more acceptable in the sight of God than many dollars sent abroad to foreign mission lands.

Those who remember the bright and sparkling performance of "A Texas Steer", as given at the Opera-house in this city a few years ago, were somewhat disappointed in the production last evening. The leading man, as the newly-elected Congressman, filled his part quite acceptably, but he lacked the needed support.

Mrs. Harvey Keith of the Northfork neighborhood had a narrow escape Sunday. Mrs. Keith, accompanied by her son and daughter, were en route to Church, and while driving along the road the horse attached to the vehicle became frightened and ran off, and in its mad flight precipitated the trio to the ground. Mrs. Keith was cut about the head, but sustained no serious injury; the son and daughter escaped with slight bruises; the buggy was wrecked.

THE Government is rushing the work of fortifying Philippine and Honolulu harbors and mines are being planted at Manila and every modern implement of war is being placed in readiness for any emergency. LUTHER BURBANK, the wizard of the vegetable and flower kingdoms, in many ways exceeds Edison as an experimental and practical genius. Think of propagating a flower that never wilts. This prodigy of this genii is thus described by a recent visitor to Mr. BURBANK's home:

"Most wonderful of all seemed to me was the never-fading Australian Star Flower, a new variety of immortelle, for which one of the largest millinery houses in the world has offered any price that its originator will accept. Think of trimming one's hat with real flowers that will never fade nor lose their color. This flower has exquisite color and form, and once introduced it is expected to form part of the stock in trade of every milliner of the country. Mrs. BURBANK plucked for me one of these priceless blossoms. I felt that this everlasting flower which would so long preserve its form and beauty was a fitting souvenir from the mother of LUTHER BURBANK."

SOME LITTLE TALES NOT TOO FAR OVERDRAWN.

Oliver Lightfinger's Vain Regrets for Misspent Life—When the President of the Great Trust "Told All"—Jack Black's Plea.

Oliver Lightfinger, cashier of the Widows and Orphans' Trust company, had just reached the railroad station with another man's wife and what was left of the $198,000 he had stolen. But on the advice of detectives he did not take the train he had intended to. On the contrary he visited Mulberry street. After a long talk in a cheerless inner room he suddenly broke down.

"I have done wrong," he cried, "I have done wrong! I have spent most of the money. I have deserted my faithful little wife. But I still love her dearly. I will do what I can to make restitution."

But he had nothing to restore, so they led him away. As the cell door closed on him he lifted up his voice and wept. "Oh, I beg of you keep all knowledge of this sad affair from the people of the little town of Wonbross. I used to sing in the choir there, and it would break my heart if I thought they found out about it."

Willie Steel, head of the Aerated Atmosphere Trust, after seven years of vain chasing, had at last been dragged into court. As the crowds looked at the great magnate they saw him suddenly arise, place his hand on his heart and dramatically declare:

"I shall tell all!"
Then he sent for his lawyer, who skillfully drew up a long statement that contained many words and no information. And when the judge and jurors heard it and the people read it they were as wise as they were before the statement was made.

And the trust went on its way rejoicing. The consumers didn't.

Tucker Ball had returned home after a month's spree. Before going on it he had taken from his wife every cent she possessed. When he arrived at the door a delegation from the neighboring police station met him and dragged him to court. As he was led away to serve the 30 days on the island presented him by the judge he suddenly bethought himself of something important.

"What, oh, what," he cried, "will my poor children do for bread now their father is taken from them?"

"You should not be too hard on me," pleaded Jack Black, who had killed a few men while pursuing his vocation of holdup man, "as I now see the error of my ways and have returned to the simple faith of my childhood."

For he figured that this plea would make an impression on those who had returned to the simple faith of their second childhood.

When the judge sternly said: "Twenty years, and I wish it lay in my power to give you more," Otto B. Lynch broke down completely. He had been convicted of bigamy, arson, swindling and a few minor crimes.

"This," he said as he was led away, "is what comes of me for deserting the best little woman who ever breathed."

But when asked who she was he could not readily answer, as there were several of her and he had become mixed on dates.—N. Y. Press.

Ubiquitous Japanese.

"Japanese naval officers are ubiquitous," said an old traveler the other day. "I was in London a few months ago when I saw a dapper little man in the uniform of a navy lieutenant on the Strand. There was something in his manner which caught my attention, and I wondered where it was that I had seen him before. It took nearly an hour's hard thinking to call it to mind, but I finally succeeded. When I last beheld him he was a wardrobe steward on an American battleship. I never see a Japanese waiter or valet on board a man-of-war or in an officers' club on a military reservation but I wonder who he is and whence he came."

Superstitious Customs.

Many of our customs date back to the dark ages and are based on superstition. We sit up with our dead because long ago our ancestors kept watch by night lest evil spirits come and bear the body away.

We shake hands with the right hand because that is the dagger hand and means that we disarm ourselves in the presence of a friend.

We bow the head in passing others because our ancestors were wont to bow before the real yoke of the oppressor. Men bare their heads because they had to unmask in the days of chivalry before the queen of beauty.

Destroyed His Statue.

Within the last month there was displayed in the fine arts hall of the Tokio industrial exhibition a marble statue of a young girl bending over a flower which she held in her hand. Its sculptor, Shikai Kitamura, becoming incensed at the jurors who were to make the awards, determined to punish them by destroying his statue. So he got a chisel and mallet, went to the hall and knocked off the head and arms of the statue before he could be stopped.

A NASTY MIXUP

The Trial of John A. Wilson, Charged With an Unnatural Crime, Develops Disgusting Business

The Man Is Entitled to Benefit of Doubts

The examining trial of John A. Wilson, charged with incest and rape of his two daughters, Daisy, aged 15, and Elsie, aged 17, was called in Judge Whitaker's Court at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

The Council Chamber in which the examining Court was held was packed with a gathering of morbid spectators, among the number being a few women who were attentive listeners to the lascivious testimony, and not a blush of shame once mantled their faces as the trial and evidence progressed.

The Commonwealth was represented by City Attorney Collins and the accused was defended by ex-County Attorney Frank P. O'Donnell.

When Wilson, with his head bandaged and still showing effects of his futile attempt at committing suicide, entered and took a seat near his Attorney, his wife, who was in the audience, came forward and seated herself beside her husband, first taking him by the hand and speaking a few consoling words.

William Nans was the first witness for the prosecution, whose testimony was in substance as follows—

After detailing who and what he was, said he returned to Maysville in April last, that he began keeping company with Elsie Wilson the 23d of August, he called on her as often as twice a week; he proposed marriage to her and was referred to her father for an answer. Wilson, after asking him as to his ability in keeping a wife, and whether he would treat her properly, took the matter under consideration and was to give his answer in a week; in the meantime a child was born; that on asking the girl who was the father of the child and being told that it was her own father, he was so shocked that he lost consciousness. Letters found on Nans' doorstep in the past week were introduced, but contents not divulged and for the present were held up by the Court.

On cross examination Nans denied having had a conversation with Cornelius C. Gilbert in the Cotton Mills, in which he had threatened Wilson's life; he also denied having a pistol at the home of his brother-in-law, Dorsey Wilson.

Dorsey Wilson, son of defendant, gave his age as 19 next April, had been married five months; said his sister told him his father was the father of her child, but afterward recalled the charge and said it was not so; he said Nans did leave a revolver at his house with the injunction to "keep it, you may need it."

Mrs. Dorsey Wilson testified to the younger girl coming to her house to stay and quoted her as having said, "Thank God, I'm away from that place." She also detailed a visit to a Doctor's office by Mrs. Wilson and her daughter, leaving the impression it was for an unlawful purpose.

Charles Russell detailed a circumstance said to have occurred in the engine room at the Cotton Mills, unsubstantiated, however. Russell was a little befogged and was somewhat pugnacious toward Attorney O'Donnell.

Here the prosecution turned the case over to the other side.

John A. Wilson was placed on the stand in his own behalf. The main points are as follows—Aged 43 years, has a wife and three children, two daughters and one son; overseer in packing-room at Cotton Mills; there is a bad feeling between Charles Russell and self, owing to Russell causing his brother to drink; denied any criminality between him and his daughter; denied charge made by Russell; have not known Nans very long; when Nans asked for his daughter put him off, did not want him in the family; didn't know condition of daughter; remembers when brother boarded with him; denied going to see doctor.

Marion Moore said he never saw anything wrong between father and daughter.

Elsie Wilson gave her age as 17; said child was born November 4th; was not her father's child; William Nans had been going with her two or three months; Nans threatened her and said what he would do if anybody interfered with him; forced her to tell what she did; said George Rooney is father of child; detailed how and when it occurred.

C. Gilbert, brother-in-law of Wilson, said Russell and Wilson had been on outs for some time; gave an account of Nans' conversation with him at the Mill in which Nans threatened to kill Wilson; gave the accused a good name. At this juncture The Ledger Scribes were called away, leaving half dozen witnesses to be heard.

The trial was resumed this morning at 9 o'clock.

RETIRED BUSINESS MAN FAVORS NEW THEORY

E. H. Lambert, of Everett, Massachusetts, Believes Stomach the Seat of Life.

One of the most interesting statements made recently concerning the much discussed Cooper theory, that has spread over the country during the past year, is made by E. H. Lambert, a retired business man, whose home is at 115 Francis Street, Everett, Mass.

Mr. Lambert has this to say in connection with Cooper and his medicine: "Some time ago I read an article about this man Cooper, in which he claimed that stomach trouble was directly responsible for most ill health. He went on to say that, although his medicine did nothing but get the stomach in sound condition, it would, in many cases, remove kidney and liver trouble and various other ailments. He argued from this that the stomach was the main cause of sickness, and stated that the success he has had with his medicines was due entirely to this fact."

"I am now fully convinced that this theory is correct, and believe Cooper has a really remarkable medicine, judging from my own experience. 'I have been a sick man for five years. Three years ago I was told by a physician that I had Bright's disease of the kidneys. I have treated constantly for this trouble since, without results. After reading the article I have mentioned, I purchased some of this man Cooper's medicine. I have been astounded by what it has done for me. I was relieved to some extent within 24 hours. Today my health is better than for five years, and so far as I can tell, my kidney trouble has disappeared."

"My wife, who had stomach trouble for some time, tried the preparation after noting its action in my case, and her improvement is fully as marked as mine. She now eats heartily three times a day without any distress whatever. Her nervousness has also left her. I certainly believe this man's success is fully justified, as he undoubtedly has a wonderful medicine."

We will gladly describe the remarkable record made by the Cooper medicines to all who wish to know of them.—T. J. Chenoweth.
